This credit recognizes institutions with programs designed to support and assess the institutional climate for underrepresented groups. An inclusive and welcoming climate and underlying culture are critical for the academic and social success of all community members. To help foster such a culture, support programs can be designed to address existing social inequities and structured assessment processes can be used to identify strengths and areas for improvement.

Applicability
Applicable to all institutions.

Measurement

Report on the current status of the institution’s programs, initiatives, and networks. Examples include targeted grants, scholarships, and awards; mentorship programs; affinity groups and peer support networks; targeted academic support programs; and other programs and initiatives that explicitly aim to support individuals from each underrepresented group. To qualify, the specific group for which points are being claimed must be mentioned in the description of a program, network, or initiative.

Commitments, plans, protocols, statements, recruitment activities, and generalized programs (e.g., that are open to all students) do not qualify in the absence of one or more of the targeted programs, initiatives, or networks described above.

Glossary

First-generation students – Undergraduate students whose parents do not have a baccalaureate degree. If another definition has been formally adopted by the institution (e.g., an undergraduate student who is the first member of their immediate family to attend college), it may be used. [Adapted from the definition used by the NASPA Center for First-Generation Student Success.]

Institutional climate – The current attitudes, behaviors, and standards of students and employees concerning the level of respect for individual needs, abilities, and potential. Also known as a campus climate assessment, an institutional climate assessment measures the extent to which all students and employees, irrespective of their underrepresented status, feel welcomed, valued, and supported in their work, studies, and/or research.

LGBTQ+ – An acronym intended to be inclusive of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, intersex, queer/questioning, asexual, and other gender identities, gender expressions, sexualities, and asexualities. [Adapted from the LGBTQIA Resource Center Glossary (University of California, Davis).]

This may include individuals who are living in poverty, at risk of poverty, or eligible for or in receipt of need-based assistance. Low-income students may be identified by their receipt of or qualification for need-based assistance (e.g., US Pell or Canadian Full-Time/Part-Time Student Grants), a family income threshold (e.g., a local, national, or international poverty line), geographic origin (e.g., economically divested communities), or as otherwise tracked by the institution.

Marginalized racial, ethnic, and/or Indigenous groups – Social groups that have less power and access to resources than one or more dominant groups and are subject to racism, settler-colonialism, and other forms of oppression and discrimination related to their racialized status, ethnicity, indigeneity, nationality, religion, or language. Dependent on an institution’s context, these groups may include:

- Indigenous and tribal peoples
- Racialized people with non-dominant status, e.g., Black people, people of African descent, people of color, “visible minorities”
- Roma, Sinti, and Travelers
- Ethnic, national, religious, and linguistic minorities

[Adapted from the work of The Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (UN Human Rights).]
Underrepresented groups – Social groups that have historically been denied access or suffered institutional discrimination and/or are currently underrepresented or disadvantaged relative to one or more dominant groups. Individuals from underrepresented groups may include, but are not limited to:
